Dr. Pollard Makes Explanation to the Public as to Prices Charged for Work.

Dr. J. J. Pollard, who recently located in Lancaster as a Veterinary Surgeon, has asked The News to advise the public with reference to prices in connection with his particular work.

His prices for visits in the city of Lancaster and in the cotton mill village is $1.50. For visits in the country his price is $1.50 for first mile and 50 cents per mile for every additional mile. This means one way only. No charge for return mileage. All calls after eight o'clock at night will be $1.00 extra.

Dr. Pollard's reason for making this explanation is, recently many of his friends have advised that their neighbors would have called him but for the fact that they understood he charged exorbitant prices; hence, this explanation. He further wishes everybody to know that he charges the same price to every one. Dr. Pollard further desires the people to understand that he has located in Lancaster for the purpose of making this his home, provided sufficient work can be had, and so far, he is well pleased with the outlook. In addition to the treatment of horses and mules, Dr. Pollard also treats cows, hogs, dogs, sheep, goats and chickens. All sick, lame and disabled stock brought to the hospital, located at Gregory-Hood Stock Company will be given free examination. This does not mean treatment.

KINGS DAUGHTERS TO MEET

A meeting of the members of the Kings Daughters will be held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Mackorell next Monday afternoon, September 25, beginning promptly at 4 o'clock. All members urged to attend.

BIGAMIST CLAIMS TO BELONG TO PEERAGE

Richmon, Va., Sept. 20.—Convicted on the charge of bigamy P. C. Blake, a self-styled English lord of Brandy Station, Va., was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary in Hanover county yesterday. Blake admits that he has three wives in Virginia, all living, and from none of whom has he been divorced or legally separated.

He claims to have been born in "Ballinacola House" Ireland, which he says he still owns.
